Her Language of Love

When Words Fail:
The Memoir of a
Multiple-Stroke Survivor
with Aphasia

Rebecca Lawton
& Dawn Rosewitz

Three months after the birth of her first daughter, Becki Lawton suffered a severe hemorrhagic stroke when an arteriovenous malformation (AVM) ruptured in her brain. Slowly, she learned to overcome her cognitive and physical changes and was eventually able to work as a special education paraprofessional. But then, a second stroke. This is Becki's story of facing continuing challenges, with family and professional support. She and her co-author, Dawn Rosewitz, explain what aphasia and apraxia look like from the inside, something uniquely valuable to those touched by stroke and those working with stroke survivors.

This book is the essence of the tragedy and triumph of people with brain injury. Becki's story takes you back to the first inkling of an "episode" as a sixth grader that might have been the start of her first AVM aneurysm 13 years later. Now, almost 60 years afterwards, Becki, along with her family and friends, describes her aphasia and stroke-strewn journey while still thriving through her joy-filled life in the face of it all with humor and grace.

—Thomas G. Broussard, Jr., Ph.D., three-time stroke survivor, president & founder, Aphasia Nation, Inc.
And Johnny Appleseed of Aphasia Awareness
